

Capital Markets Indicative Data

TP FX Spots and Forwards

Background

Tullett Prebon (TP) provides high-quality FX pricing and liquidity data across Spot and Forward markets, sourced from some of the world's leading market makers. This product supports price discovery, risk management, and execution efficiency for institutions operating in global currency markets.

Key Benefits

- Broad Instrument Coverage: Includes Spot, Deliverable Forwards, Non-Deliverable Forwards (NDFs), Swap Points, and Onshore/Offshore spreads across G10 and EM currencies. Which enables comprehensive hedging and trading strategies for global FX exposure, including restricted currency markets.
- Real-Time & Historical Data Delivery: Low-latency APIs for live pricing plus hourly snapshots and end-of-day archives. Which supports algorithmic trading, risk management, and regulatory reporting with accurate and timely data.

Use Cases

Managing Expected Currency Movements:

Some corporates may use FX forwards as part of their broader treasury processes to bring more predictability to future import or export related cash flows.

General Exposure Management for Investment Portfolios:

Investment managers sometimes incorporate FX hedging tools to help reduce the impact of currency fluctuations on portfolios that hold international assets.

Short Term Currency Exposure Management:

Market participants, including traders, may occasionally use short dated FX instruments to help manage very near term currency positions arising from operational or trading activity.
